“ Hello Katie

I really appreciate you keeping me company talking with me on the phone off and on your last day on earth. When I was climbing the mountain to go camping you kept me company encouraging me to make it to the top by sunset. Also you told me to be careful and "don't die" slipping on the loose steep cliff side. We made plans to meet for a quick cup of coffee after you got out of work the next morning. I said I might smell from hiking up and back down the mountain then driving to meet you for a friendly cup of coffee in Caribou after you get out off work. The last thing you said to me was that you didn't care if I smelt and that you probably would to after work. Then minutes later you were gone. I didn't know you were gone but something felt off. I went to Caribou had that coffee. I never saw you but I think you saw me. I felt you. I felt you on the Mountain and I felt you that morning after you said your goodbyes to your family first. But since then I haven't felt you. I thought you metaphorically ghosted me as you have of and on since we've know each other when you get deeply depressed and I wish that was what really happened and I went on thinking that is what happened. But you literally ghosted me lol. Though I guess you told me what happened and I thought it was just a bad dream I had and refused to think that would ever happen to you. I do remember you visiting me now. Today I celebrate another year I'm still alive on this Earth. I will remember you and appreciate every day that I get to wake up to live another because as you've shown we never know when our last day will be and it could happen w/o rhyme or reason or warning. Yesterday I just found out what happened that night wasn't a dream but you saying goodbye but then making me forget you visted me after until I got used to not hearing your sweet voice on the phone or your 3am text when you just needed someone to talk to. You thought I was doing you the favor but it was me who thought you were doing me the favor of choosing me to be your friend in your time of need. I didn't know, I wasn't ready to think your time was up. But now that reality has made me aware I will say goodbye. You will always be loved you will always be remembered you will be missed.

Thank you for gracing my life. Between now and then til I see you again keep that 1 day we will have that coffee my friend.
