Renee also leaves behind numerous nieces and nephews and her long-time best friend and Raytheon co-worker Lynn Kennedy of Rutland. Paul and Renee's journey through life began by a random meeting at a gas station on route 117 in Leominster in 1985 where Paul was a gas attendant and Renee pulled in one night in a big Chevy pickup with a flat tire and Paul helped repair the tire while Renee watched and chatted with Paul. They fell in love immediately and never looked back. Renee is of Russian descent and was born in Pontiac, Michigan on July 11th, 1954. Raised in Sudbury, MA and graduated from Lincoln-Sudbury Regional High School in 1973. Renee, in her early career, worked as an electronics technician and inspector for

Rascal-Milgo Waters Manufacturing, Motorola, and ended with a lengthy two plus decade's career in electronics at Raytheon in Sudbury, MA where she worked on many top-secret military programs including different radar systems and the Patriots surface to air missile program. Renee would never disclose secret information, not even to her husband despite his numerous attempts. Throughout her career at Raytheon, she worked at the plants in Sudbury, Northborough, and Hager Pond in Marlborough ending her career to stay home and raise her family. Renee also worked part time in the Leominster school system cafeterias where her daughter was attending school.

Renee's greatest joys in life were her family and tending to her home. She loved to make home cooked meals, and to paint and decorate her home inside and out with primitives. Renee would change all the decorations throughout the house for all four seasons of the year each and every year creating an incredibly warm home environment to come home to for her family. She loved planting and growing flowers mostly outside the house, and loved long drives on a motorcycle and car throughout the back roads of Massachusetts and Vermont. Renee also loved sewing and hand made every single curtain in her home and also changed them out regularly to match the furniture. She was an avid collector of seasonal primitives and specialized in pumpkins with well over 200 in various sizes, colors and shapes in her collection always found all over the house, never in the same spot for very long. Renee owned stock in Pierces Primitives in Leominster at least that is what her husband Paul claims. Paul continually finds pumpkins in unopened boxes hidden all over the house. Renee also dabbled in hairstyling, and would cut and style some of her family member's hair throughout her life. She also enjoyed helping Paul with their side business of educating electricians in central Massachusetts.

Renee will rest eternally and eventually with Paul at the St. Joseph Cemetery on Clarendon Street in Fitchburg, section 6D Lot #9, very back row right against the fence overlooking the cemetery.
