“ I knew Leo at Plastikan for about five years while I was a kid working there after high school and through college in the 1970s. Although I saw him every working day, I didn't know him all that well. Those factories are busy places with short breaks! But I was familiar enough to know he was a decent man. I never saw him angry or unfriendly. I was surprised to see his obit today and recognized him immediately even though the black hair is gone. God Bless Leo and condolences to his family. Bon voyage, Leo.
