“ We have many memories. We became close in high school and stayed connected even when life took us in different directions. There were times we laughed until we cried back then, and I cried again when I heard you were no longer here. Even with distance between us, and not seeing each other as much as we would have liked, you were always on my mind, and in my heart, and you will forever be in my heart, as one of the closest friends I've ever had. I will always love you and cherish all the times we've had together.

“ Just a few days ago, I experienced the unimaginable loss of my best friend and true love. Losing a soulmate is a pain that words can hardly express, and it's a heartache that only those who have gone through it can truly understand. My deepest wish is that no one else has to feel this devastating sorrow of losing someone so integral to their life and soul.

In this time of grief, I urge you to cherish your loved ones and remind them that you love them—none of us is guaranteed tomorrow. I pray that Jesus embraces my wife in heaven and provides comfort to all the lives Lisa touched—her family and her loved ones. We all need healing and peace during such a challenging time.
