“ Marc,

I was shocked and saddened by the news of your passing. The timing couldn't have been more unfortunate, especially with so many things to look forward to with Alex right around the corner. He will be reminded of your love, find comfort in knowing he was a source of positive inspiration in your life, and I'm confident somehow, someday, you'll find a way to connect from afar to let him know you're there.

I am so thankful for the amazing son we brought into this world, and I am confident that you'll be watching from above as he grows and accomplishes all his dreams. Although we parted ways several years ago, the kindness you also showed to my daughter Kayla and cousin Jade was never forgotten, and there were some fond memories that were left behind such as our trips to Las Vegas, the Lost River, and more.

There are pieces of you that will live on through our child forever, and I know you will be a witness to them all: his interest in cooking (definitely not from me, lol!), his natural athletic ability, and there's no denying the strong physical resemblance.

I hope you have found peace where you are. My heart goes out to your family.

Marc, I am sorry you and Alex were not able to re-connect. I will always remember your smile, love of cooking healthy food, kindness to the kid's. Alex is your twin, he looks like you, smiles like you and even walks like you. Also shows a interest in cooking. Anybody who is lucky enough to know Alex is filled with laughter, kindness. He has a ton of friends and is very active . He is loved by everyone who knows him. He is perfect! I know this is hard for your mother and Alex. Rest in peace!
