He attended Northeastern University in Boston, Massachusetts where he earned a Batcheler's degree in accounting. He and his wife Barbara were active members of the Harvard Unitarian Universalist Church for many years. One of his favorite church activities was the annual auction and dinner, in addition to Sunday services and social gatherings.

Throughout his life, Warren had a love of the arts. From paintings by Andrew Wyeth to Chinese artifacts, he would learn about the artist and the medium that was used. Classical music was something Warren thoroughly enjoyed. He cherished attending performances at Indian Hill Chamber Music throughout the years and the Vermont Mozart Festival during summers.

He loved baseball and enjoyed watching the Red Sox games as well as playing in a local league. He enjoyed spending time during hot summer days swimming, playing cards, vacationing on Cape Cod and the islands.

“ He was a wonderful, good natured, profound man. He was always being inclusive by asking questions and everyone weighing in. His sense of humor and some of his strange ways would us have us giggling for days. I remember him always wearing a suite and trying to look proper but I remember the second time I met him he was in “play clothes” and had a black eye. I asked him what happened and he said “well I was playing soft ball with the guys in the league and obviously I’m not very good at”.
Love you and miss you.

I worked with Warren back in 1990 or so while at Stone & Webster. I really loved his little chuckle, when I made him laugh, which was a lot.
